The Royal College of Physicians.

This College was instituted at Nancy in 1752, by Stanislaus, King of Poland, on a plan no less singular than useful; that prince, besides investing it with the privileges usually enjoyed by Colleges of Physicians in the different countries of Europe, likewise founded a Botanic Garden, which he annexed to the College, together with Professorships in the different branches of Medicine, all of which are now taught here with great reputation. His Polish Majesty likewise directed, that for the purpose of improving and extending Medical Knowledge, the College should be empowered to elect a certain number of Honorary Fellows, and Corresponding Members, resident in different parts of Europe. The Botanic Garden belonging to the College contains upwards of a thousand plants arranged according to the Linnæan system; the College is likewise in possession of a valuable Medical Library.

The FACULTY of MEDICINE.

The University of Paris, which is one of the most ancient and celebrated seminaries of learning in Europe, is composed of four Faculties, viz. those of Divinity, Civil Law, Medicine, and the Arts. No person is allowed to practise physic at Paris unless he be a Member of the Faculty of Medicine, Physicians to the Royal Family and the Princes of the Blood only excepted. The being admitted a Member of this Faculty, even after having taken a Doctor's degree in a French University, is attended with an expence of about two hundred pounds sterling, and the Candidate must undergo a great variety of public examinations (upwards of ninety,) in the course of about two years and a half. The Members of the Faculty have the title of Doctors Regent. One of the Members is chosen annually with the title of Doyen, or Dean, who acts as President, and five other Members are appointed every year to deliver lectures in Latin on Pathology, Physiology, Surgery, the Materia Medica, and Chemistry. The Faculty's Library is open every Thursday in the afternoon.

The ROYAL SOCIETY of MEDICINE.

Instituted by the present King of France, in 1776. The Members of the Society are divided into three classes, of Fellows, Candidates, and Corresponding Members. Of these three classes, that of Corresponding Members only is unlimited as to number; the number of foreign Fellows is never to exceed sixty. The views of this institution extend to all the branches of Medicine, but more particularly to epidemical diseases. The meetings of this Society are held every Tuesday afternoon, in the King's palace of the Louvre, where the Society has a numerous Medical Library, furnished at the expence of government. Such is the present flourishing state of this respectable institution, that at their last anniversary meeting, on the 10th of October 1778, they were able to announce five Prize-subjects for the ensuing year. (See our article of Prize-Subjects.)

The ROYAL ACADEMY of SURGERY.

This Academy was founded in 1732. The present very elegant building was opened in 1775. Physiology, Anatomy, Surgery, Midwifery, and Surgical Pharmacy are taught here by different Professors, at the King's expence. The meetings of the Academy are weekly; it is composed of all the Master Surgeons of Paris, and of a certain number of Honorary and Foreign Members. Five volumes in 4to of the Memoirs of this Academy have been already published, and a sixth is in some forwardness.

The HOTEL DIEU.

This is one of the largest and most crowded Hospitals in Europe, containing on an average upwards of three thousand patients. There are several rows of beds in each ward, and it is usual to see four and sometimes six patients in each bed. The reader may judge of the insalubrity of this Hospital when he is told that about one in five die of all that are admitted. All sick and wounded persons, venereal patients only excepted, are received here night and day, without any recommendation.

Physicians, Dr. Cochu, Dr. de Jean,
Dr. Belleteste, Dr. Majault,
Dr. Doulcet, all Members of the Faculty.

Principal Surgeon, M. Moreau.

The CHARITY HOSPITAL.

The patients in this Hospital are disposed in separate beds, but the wards are neither so airy, nor so well ventilated as those of our London Hospitals, and all the bed-heads are of wood. The number of patients who die in this Hospital is in the proportion of one in eleven.

Physicians, Dr. Maloet,
Dr. Thierry de Bussy,
Dr. Dumangin, all of the Faculty of Paris.
Principal Surgeon, M. Sue, senior.
